MATS School of Life Science celebrates: "National Science Day 2015"

With a vision to promote active involvement of students and teachers in science related activities and innovations. MATS School of Life Science and Sciences celebrated the "National Science Day", the day on which Dr. C.V. Raman discovered the Raman Effect. As a part of the event, the department organized an expert talk on "Science and Technology with Perspective of IPR". The talk was delivered by Dr. Amit Dubey, Senior Scientist, CGCOST, Raipur. In the above said talk, Dr. Dubey explained about the innovations in Science, importance of protecting Intellectual Property rights and its effect on Socio-economic development of society, state and country at large.

The students keenly participated and interacted with the speaker. Along with this, various Science related activities and competitions on the theme "Current Trends in Science", were organized by the Department of Life Science and Sciences for the student. The students enthusiastically participated in all the competitions namely oral presentation, model & Poster competition.
